UNIT

Chances are that you listen to some kind of music every day. Maybe you listen to music on your way to school or have a special playlist for when you study. Music can energize you or make you sad. Explore the different ways in which music influences your daily life.

In this unit, you will:

- Talk about your music habits.
- Read about how music can influence your life.
- Watch a video about how music affects the brain.
- Create a playlist with your current favourite tunes.
- Read about the use of music in the media.
- Practise grammar: simple present and imperatives.

Final Reinvestment Task:

• Write an informative text about the ways in which music is part of teenagers' lives.

What role

does music play

in your life?

Music Habits @

How important is music to you and your friends? Ask and answer these questions to start to define your music habits. In the final task, you will write about the role of music in teenagers' lives.

1. Read the Music Habits statements. Check if the statements are true or false for you.

| Music Habits   | True | False |
|--|------|-------|
| a. Music is a big part of my daily life.                                       |      |       |

The Influence of Sound

Read about how music influences your life. In the final task, you may write about the impact of music on teenagers' emotions, identity and studies.

Discuss

- What music do you listen to when you are happy? Sad? Anxious? Other emotions?
- Which songs influence your emotions or change your mood?
- How is your taste in music now different from what it was when you were younger?
- Do you listen to music while you study? Does it help you to perform better in school?
- What genre of music helps you to concentrate?

Before Reading

1. Match each vocabulary word with its definition. Look for the words in bold in the text to help you guess their meaning. Use the reading strategy.

Guess Meaning from Context

To guess the meaning of unknown words, study the context: the surrounding words and sentences. Context will give you clues to understand the meaning of the word.

Music Teens

abies and children do it. Parents and grandparents do it. Everybody listens to music. Music is particularly important for teenagers. It can influence your emotions, help you to shape your identity and even have an impact on how well you perform at school.

Music and Emotions

The teenage years are filled with emotions. Teenagers use music to help them cope with situations that they face in their everyday lives. After a difficult day at school, listening to your favourite song can help you release the stress of the day. There's nothing like an up-tempo song to give you energy! In fact, it has been proven that listening to upbeat classical music improves a person's mood. Sad music evokes many different emotions but not necessarily negative ones. When people listen to sad music, they experience peace and nostalgia. So even if the music itself is sad, the emotions connected with it are mainly positive.

The person may feel comforted by the melody and lyrics.

Studies show that the music people listen to as teenagers sticks with them into their adult lives. It gets attached to the memories and creates strong emotional connections. When adults hear songs that they listened to as teens, the same emotions surface and seem as strong as they were years before. So, in 20 or 30 years when you hear a song that is one of your favourites today, don't be surprised if those memories and emotions quickly come back to you.

Music and Identity

During the teenage years, young people gradually break away from their parents' influence and figure out who they are as individuals. Music contributes to this process. In fact, teenagers often identify with a certain social group based on a shared taste in music. Music can help teenagers to increase their sense of belonging to a group. When your friends get together, you connect with each other by listening to some of your favourite tunes. Maybe you look forward to singing camp songs around a fire or karaoke with friends. When people sing together, they experience a feeling of acceptance and a greater sense of community.

Music and School

Studies show that children and teenagers who study music generally perform better in school than those who have no musical training. This is because learning and practising an instrument stimulates the brain and helps a person develop skills that they then transfer to other areas. However, you can use music in your studies to help you develop your full potential even if you are not a musician. People are more efficient when their minds are relaxed and focused. Music can help you attain this mindset so that, when you begin working or studying, you work effectively.

- The type of music you choose to listen to is important. Studies show that instrumental music helps increase a person's concentration skills. So, listen to relaxing music while you study, and choose upbeat music if you need the motivation to get started on an assignment. Even if you don't have music with you in class, just hearing the songs in your mind can help you achieve the same effect. Give it a try! Hum a few notes of your favourite song in your head, relax your mind, and get ready to tackle your assignment with confidence.
- Even if you aren't the world's next Mozart, music can help you achieve an emotional balance, better understand who you are as a person and improve your study skills. Whether you are listening to or playing music, singing along or simply dancing to a popular tune, music activates many different areas of the brain and is beneficial to you in many areas of your life.

THE Medium Music

Try watching TV without the sound, or getting to the next level in that video game with the volume down low. There's something missing, and it isn't just dialogue. Music sells products in advertisements, and it tells stories in films, television shows and video games. Finding the right music to accompany an onscreen performance is like selecting the right playlist for your study session. Choose well and, in the case of advertising, each time you hear the song you will think of the product. In other media, music helps create the suspense, drama or romance that makes each scene memorable.

Glossaru

jingles: short songs for ads bank on: depend on catchy: memorable partnered: collaborated prestige: status based on high quality or success

KFC: Kentucky Fried

Chicken

Advertising

10 In the early days of television, jingles were the most commonly used form of music in advertising. Nowadays, songs by popular artists are often used to advertise products and brands. When people are familiar with the music, they are more likely to pay attention to the commercial and retain the information about the product it promotes. Pepsi was one

<sub>15</sub> of the first big brands to bank on this in 1984 when a commercial used a customized version of Michael Jackson's "Billie Jean." The catchy melody was hard to resist and the company's sales increased significantly. More recently, major brands like Gucci and McDonald's have partnered with popular artists like Miley Cyrus and BTS, using their upbeat music

20 to promote products ranging from fancy perfumes to fast food.

Instrumental music played in the background creates a relaxed state, making a person more open to assimilating new information. That is why marketers use this type of music to sell everything from running shoes to telephones, cars and computers. In fact, studies show that classical music used in commercials suggests prestige and reassures listeners, making them more likely to trust the company or product being advertised. It can even create humour. Take KFC's "Fleur de Donuts" commercial, which uses the well-known "Flower 30 Duet" by French composer Delibes to advertise the donut chicken sandwich. The marketers play on the familiarity of this soft and gentle melody to create an amusing ad that attracts viewers' attention.

Movies and Television

- 35 A film or television show's soundtrack can be as important as the actors in creating emotion and drama for the spectators. Think of scary films like the classic Jaws. Even if you haven't seen that movie, you probably know the suspenseful music that announces the shark's arrival. Another iconic few notes of music are those associated with
- 40 the Star Wars series. The majestic theme prepares viewers for the adventures that are to come. Coming-of-age movies like The Breakfast Club and Love, Simon or popular teen TV series like Stranger Things feature the big hits of different eras with sad or uplifting songs that try to tell viewers how to feel even before the action unfolds.
- 45 Imagine these without the music. They just wouldn't be the same.

Video Games

Music and video games are now so closely connected that video game music is its own genre. In fact, there are orchestras and composers that work exclusively to create music to accompany this kind of virtual action. Video game music motivates players and helps them to stay focused as they play the game. These pieces are mostly instrumental and set the mood for intergalactic battles, high-speed car chases and military battles. Symphonic scores from classics like "The Legend of Zelda" and the "Final Fantasy" series feature 60 a variety of music that can help players become more immersed in the gaming experience.

Music in television, film, video games and advertising enhances the 65 message, whatever it might be. When the right music is paired with the right brand or dramatic action, it creates a winning situation for the marketer, director or game developer. The next time you consume some form of entertainment, consider how much of your reaction is affected by the musical accompaniment, whether it's a desire to go shopping or eat a juicy burger, an urge to cry or laugh, 70 or an adrenaline rush that gets you to the next level.

The Power of Music in Film @ @

Observe how a change in music can drastically change your perception of a movie scene.

Before Watching

1. Read about the history of music in film. Underline three facts that you learned about music in cinema.

Music in Film

The first movies, known as silent films, had no recorded sound. Spectators depended on visual cues to understand the story and the emotions experienced by the characters. However, even though there was no dialogue present in these early movies, there was music. Pianists, organists, or small orchestras performed live music while the movie played. They selected short pieces that fit the mood of the scene being projected on the screen.

An important moment in film history occurred in 1933 when composer Max Steiner produced the musical score for the movie King Kong. This instrumental music was carefully composed to fit the storyline and included different themes to introduce the different characters. Composers today continue to write musical scores like this one to bring drama, romance, and adventure to the big screen.

Some films feature well-known popular songs, while others use original songs written for the movie itself. Classic songs like "Stayin' Alive" by the Bee Gees and "My Heart Will Go On" by Céline Dion were written for movies. In musical films or musicals, some of the dialogue is even carried out in song.

From dramatic pieces that accompany the action on screen to energetic or sentimental songs sung by the characters themselves, without music, movies would definitely not be the same.

Simple Present

Grammar Check

Read the advice column. Circle all the simple present verbs. Look at the chart below if you need help.

THIS WEEK'S TOPIC:

ASK JOSIE BADHABITS

Dear Josie,

Noisy Knuckles

I (have) a bad habit that I need to break. Everybody looks at me when I do it! My bad habit is that I crack my knuckles constantly. When I am in an exam, I just don't stop! My classmates tell me to be quiet and give me dirty looks. Am I embarrassed? TOTALLY! How do I quit?

Dear Noisy Knuckles,

I have an idea. You need to replace that bad habit with a better one. Why don't you put an elastic band around your wrist? Every time you feel the urge to crack your knuckles, snap the elastic band instead. I want to know if it works!

Good luck!

Josie

▶ Use the simple present to describe:

- Facts School always ends in June.
- Opinions
- Football is the best sport.

- Habits Jen often plays tennis on Thursdays.
- Present states It is cold outside.

For the verb to be, use am, are or is.

For other verbs, use the base form of the verb. Add s or es to form the third-person singular.

|          | Affirmative   |  |  |
|----------|---|--|--|
|          | Verb To Be   | Other Verbs  |  |
|          | Subject + am/are/is + rest of the sentence.                         | Subject + base form of the verb + rest of the sentence. |  |
| Singular | I am (I'm) You are (You're) She/He/It is (She's/He's/It's) — funny. | I love You love She/He/It loves — chocolate.                   |  |
| Plural   | We/You/They are(We're/You're/They're)                           | We/You/They love   |  |

Contractions  $\rightarrow$  In informal English, we often drop a letter and replace it with an apostrophe: you are  $\rightarrow$  you're. Exception  $\rightarrow$  The third person singular of have is has.

Time markers  $\rightarrow$  To express frequency of habits, use always, often, sometimes, occasionally, never.

| Spelling Rules: Third Person Singular Endings                              |   |  |  |  |
|--|---|--|--|--|
| Verb   | Rule  | Example  |  |  |
| Most verbs (work, see, eat)  | Add s.  | works, sees, eats                                |  |  |
| Verbs that end with a consonant + y (try, worry, apply)                    | Change the y to i and add es . | tries, worries, applies                          |  |  |
| Verbs that end with ch, o, s, sh, x, z (search, do, pass, fish, fix, fizz) | Add es .                                     | searches, does, passes,fishes, fixes, fizzes |  |  |

A. Underline the verb in each sentence. Then, complete each sentence with one of the following subjects. You may use some subjects more than once.

- is ready for her vacation.
- enjoy my grandmother's cookies.
- 3. _____ are at the beach.
- 4. _____ rains a lot every spring.
- 5. _____ is at his aunt's house today.
- 6. _____ am a good writer.
- 7. _____ are a great friend.
- 8. _____ love their dog.

To correctly pronounce the -sending of a verb in the simple present, pay attention to the final sound of the base form. Listen to the Pronunciation guide on the platform for more information and practice.

B. Complete the text with the simple present of the verbs in parentheses.

Speaking Strategies

Ask Questions

Ask for feedback about how you are doing. If you do not understand, ask others to clarify what they mean.

Recast

Repeat back what you hear to check understanding.

Gesture, Stall for Time or Substitute

Use gestures to clarify your message or words like umm when you are not sure, or use less precise words to describe what you mean.

Take Risks

Experiment with new language. It is okay to make mistakes! Lower anxiety by reminding yourself that you are improving every day.

Express and Support an Opinion

It is important to communicate your ideas clearly when discussing a topic. Support your opinion with a reason or an example.

Brainstorm

Build on the ideas of others. Listen carefully to what your partner says.

Add Details

When you interact orally, make the conversation more interesting by giving examples or telling stories.

Practise

Look for opportunities outside of class to practise speaking English.

Encourage Yourself and Others

Support all efforts to speak in Enalish.

Self-Monitor and Self-Evaluate

Check and correct what you say. Pay attention to any new language you are using.

Rephrase

Repeat your ideas using different words to help others understand.

Develop Cultural Understanding

Communicate with English speakers to learn more about their culture.

Set Goals and Objectives

Set short-term and long-term goals to improve your English.
